

SPOTLIGHT MEDIA PRODUCTIONS

Give Generously and Let Go!

LIVE SEARCH:

Navigation icons: home, search, RSS, and a page indicator showing '2'.

Tweet button with '1' retweet count.

By Robert C. Jameson

Retweet button with '1' count.

Tweet button.

“What does that mean and why should I give at all? I don’t have any money to give away. Money’s tight these days. Haven’t you been listening to the news?”

It’s interesting that when we think about giving, we think we have to dig into our wallets and give someone our hard earned cold cash. Cash is nice and it is important to share our abundance; however, that is not the type of giving I am talking about.

There is something interesting about us humans — we enjoy the process of giving. It makes us feel good. In fact, the act of giving and receiving is a core part of life on a very basic level. Each time we inhale we receive and each time we exhale we give. If we just received and didn’t give, we would die. In the breathing analogy, a natural balance is maintained for life and health to be present. The same is true out here in the world. It’s important to maintain a balance between our giving and receiving.

We also have let go of what we give. However, can you imagine trying to hold onto your last exhale? The universe does not hold on either as it gives us our next breath. There’s a continuous process of letting go on both sides of the equation.

Do you hold onto your giving? Are you afraid to receive from someone because they hold onto their giving? Unfortunately, most people don’t know how to let go. So, let’s explore the actual process of giving and receiving.

When you receive something from someone your job is just to receive it. When you receive it, it’s nice to be polite and say, “Thank you.” Then, after you receive it, I would encourage you to cut any strings the person might have connected to their giving. Just put the item or compliment aside for a while and claim it. It’s now yours. At this point, you can cherish it forever, give it away, trash it, sell it, or use it however you choose to use it. It’s yours.

The person who gave you the item or the compliment might have expectations that you now owe them something. They might want you to clean out their closet. You just might love cleaning out closets and it’s something you would love to do, so go ahead and have fun. However, you’re not required to give back. When you received the item or compliment you completed the action for the giver. If you didn’t receive the gift, the giver would have felt cheated, insulted or slighted some way. “How dare you not take my gift?” Or, “There must be something wrong with me if you don’t want to receive a gift from me.” It’s important to receive and your receiving completes the action.

RECENT STORIES

Give Generously and Let Go!

Be Careful of Your Thoughts: They Control Your Destiny

Entertainment And Media Mogul, Adrienne Papp Honored For Her International Writing

What I love about you is...

The Latest Technology in Anti-Aging and Detoxification Hollywood is talking about.

SPOTLIGHT MEDIA PRODUCTIONS

About Us

All Articles

Archives

Contact Us

Have you Got a Story For Adrienne?

Privacy Policy

Staff

Terms of Use

TWITTER

ARCHIVES

June 2014

April 2014

March 2014

February 2014

January 2014

When you give, it's

Lived Generously

important to give freely out of your overflow. When we give out of our overflow, we usually don't have any expectations. The gift is just given freely. However, if we do not give out of our overflow and give out of our essence, we are tired and yet, we are still giving, then we do have expectations. And, rarely are our expectations fulfilled. When we give out of our essence we give with strings attached and we often end up walking away from the situation feeling resentful and bitter.

Being aware of staying balanced in our giving and not giving too much, helps keep us in a loving and centered place.

Okay, so now you're balanced in your giving and receiving, you're not holding onto your gift, you're not having unrealistic expectations, and you're not building up resentments. So what do you give — if you're not giving money?

How about giving your loving, your peace, your joy, your smile, your compliments, your time, your words of appreciation, your touch, your sharing and your caring. And give generously! The act of giving becomes your reward. Best of all, your life will be joy-filled and full.

Follow Robert C. Jameson on Twitter: www.twitter.com/robertcjameson

About the Author of This Article: As a licensed marriage and family therapist, Robert C. Jameson focuses on helping clients understand and overcome issues, such as anger, hurt, depression, anxiety, love, relationships, boundaries and limiting beliefs, to name a few. During his years of private practice, Mr. Jameson found it useful to give many of his clients "homework" in the form of handouts to support their work while in session. The Keys to Joy-Filled Living was born from his handout of tried and true exercises and techniques. Mr. Jameson is also the author of Thoughts of Pomey, an entertaining book of pictures and thoughts that guides the reader to expand their perceptions of life and relationships with others, Don't Lose Weight – Give It Away, which explores the emotional aspects of weight loss, and The Pocket Oasis, a fun and useful pocket-sized book that can be used as a tool to help center anyone during a hectic day.

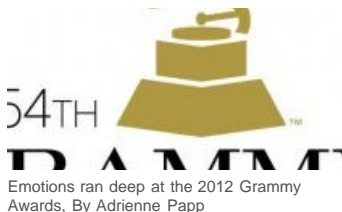

In addition to his work as a therapist and writer, Mr. Jameson is an accomplished musician. He produced and released, "Ani Hu – Empathy with God", an hour-long CD, which helps the listener to meditate, relax, or sleep. Recently, he released "Healing Affirmations & Positive Self-Talk", an hour-long CD, which encourages the listener to create positive thoughts and feelings. He is frequently featured on The Huffington Post.

Share the knowledge!

You may also like:

Inside the 2012 Cannes Film Festival

The Most Luscious Wisp of Happiness from Japan: Chocolate!

September 2013

August 2013

June 2013

March 2013

February 2013

January 2013

December 2012

November 2012

October 2012

September 2012

August 2012

June 2012

April 2012

February 2012

December 2011

October 2011

September 2011

August 2011

June 2011

May 2011

April 2011

March 2011

February 2011

January 2011

December 2010

November 2010

October 2010

September 2010

August 2010

July 2010

June 2010

May 2010

April 2010

March 2010

February 2010

The Lorenzo's Oil Factor From Miracle to Tragedy to Miracle

Inside the Golden Globes

The Tool of the 21st Century: Creating with Conscience!

Be Sociable, Share!

Share This Article:

Comments are closed.

January 2010

December 2009

November 2009

October 2009

September 2009

June 2009

May 2009

April 2009

March 2009

February 2009

January 2009

December 2008

November 2008

September 2008

August 2008

July 2008

June 2008

May 2008

April 2008

March 2008